The Children's Home.

Mr. Lenhardt, the superintendent of the Clark County Children's Home wishes the Globe-Bulletin to remind our citizens that he has not yet received presents enough to supply the eighty children at the home, on New Year's eve, December 31st. Citizens can be left with Black Bros. &amp; Co., Wissel &amp; Stafford, and Burns &amp; LaFerdy.

Little Madeline Searach, a girl about two years old, died Sunday evening, as the result of scarlet fever, with which she was taken about six weeks ago. She took the disease outside of the home, but was taken down with it the next day after she arrived. Her mother resides in the city.

Take Care of the Children.

For children, Brandt's Pills are simply invaluable. One or two pills taken every night for ten days will cure them of scarlet fever, diphtheria, whooping cough, colds, diarrhea or local pains.

Brandt's Pills are purely vegetable—contain no mercury, mineral or dangerous drugs. They require no care in diet or exposure, and are perfectly safe for old or young, male or female. One or two at night, for a week, taken on an empty stomach, will cure the worst case of dyspepsia, liver complaint or rheumatism.

Mrs. Julia Fuller, a venerable lady who lives at the Holford residence, on the North Side, has been suffering for a long time with a large tumor on her face, but she is now much better and it is believed that the tumor will ultimately fall off.

I am handling your Athlaphoros. It is quite new here and is giving good satisfaction whenever tried. I have Dosh, at present, a few boxes, and am anxious regarding your experience with this sovereign remedy for rheumatism and neuralgia.

Lient. Frank S. Rice, U. S. A., sends the Christmas issue of the Los Angeles (Cal.) Daily Herald to the Globe-Bulletin.

Disappointment in matters of pleasure is hard to bear in matters affecting health, it becomes erred. Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup never disappoints those who use it for obtrusive coughs, colds, irritation of the throat and lungs, etc.

A Prediction Realized.

Texas Sitings.—"Cold man Pennington has married again."

"You don't tell me so."

"Yes, and he has married a right young girl, forty years younger than he."

"Well, I declare. His other wife only died six months ago and he went on so at the grave that I expected that he would lose his wits."

"Well, you see your prediction has come to pass."

FATAL RESULTS.

Key Worthington Dies from the Effects of a Fall Down Stairs.

About 10 o'clock last Saturday evening an accident occurred at Ward's boarding house, No. 119 East Main Street, of which little was thought at the time, but from which the victim died Sunday afternoon. Worthington is a man almost fifty years old and had a wife and eleven children residing east of town. On Thursday last he had a disagreement with his wife on a family subject and left her. On Friday he took up his residence at Ward's. He was a bricklayer by trade and eked out a living by performing other odd jobs, such as digging cellars, etc.

The front room upstairs, in which Worthington slept, has a window in front, just beneath which starts a steep, curved staircase. Worthington started early Saturday morning, and the man who slept in the other bed in the room states that he arose about ten o'clock and attempted to take the steps too far and lost his footing, tumbling all the way down stairs. At the centre of the stairs was an open door, against the easing of which he struck his head, cutting an ugly gash just above the left ear and making a star-shaped fracture of the skull. The people of the house were aroused by the noise, and carried the wounded man to his bed. He was evidently sickened by the fall, for he counted a great deal. Dr. Miranda was summoned to attend his injuries. Seeing that the man had vomited he supposed that the fall and the heavy stupor in which the patient was lying, were the results of intoxication, and after dressing and bandaging the wound came away. Yesterday morning he rallied again, expecting to find his patient doing finely, but found him, on the contrary, still in a profound stupor. He called Dr. Russell to his assistance, and he pronounced the man in a dying condition, past all hope of recovery. The fractured bone of the skull had been pressing hard upon the brain all night, and there was little vitality left. The bone was raised after the ordinary method of boring and prying, and the wound again dressed, but the operation was too late, and Roy Worthington died about 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

AFTER MANY DAYS.

The Boy With the Boots: A True Story.

About thirty years ago a boy applied to D. S. Morris for employment, informing him that his mother was a widow and sick, and he wished to get work so that he could help support her. Mr. Morris could not give him employment but he went and bought a pair of new boots for him. The boy put them on, and as he went off, Mr. Morris watched him. He would first look down on his boots, with their bright red tops, and then he would dance; then, after taking a little farther on the street, he would take another look and then have another dance.

A few days since a bright, well-dressed gentleman of about 40, called upon Mr. Morris and asked him to be kind to his son. Mr. Morris replied that he did not. The gentleman then asked—"Do you remember giving a boy a pair of boots thirty years ago?" Mr. Morris remembered, and the gentleman proceeded to say that his mother and her family were now in good circumstances. He had himself earned money and bought and paid for a good home in Cincinnati and his brother was forward in a printing office and doing well.

COUNCILMAN STEPHAN DEAD.

He Passes Away Sunday Afternoon, at Residence on Maple Avenue.

Yesterday afternoon Councilman Henry Stephan, of the Eighth ward, died at his residence on Maple avenue. He had been sick for six weeks, and it will be one month tomorrow since he has been able to attend a council meeting. The deceased was born in Germany in 1834, making his 61. He was the father of five children, three sons and two daughters. Mr. Stephan was elected to council in the fall of 1881, to fill the unexpected term of John L. Conkin from the Eighth ward, the latter having moved out of the ward. The term expired in April, 1884, when the deceased was re-elected and would have held his place till April, 1886. He was then connected with the Springfield Engine &amp; Thresher Co. for about thirty years, the last fifteen years having occupied the position of foreman of the entire works. There will be no meeting of council tomorrow evening, out of respect to the dead member. The funeral service will be given later.

A SPRINGFIELD TEACHER.

Her Adventures in Colorado.

Years ago Miss Coleman was an industrious and excellent young lady, who taught school in this city, and saved her earnings and sent them east for the support of her family. She was self-denying and courageous and very devoted to those needing help and consolation. A few years ago she went to Colorado, to live with a lady friend, who was in ill-health. There she met a young Englishman, the son of a very wealthy gentleman, who had put him and his brother on a large ranch. The brother became homesick and returned to England, but the young Englishman, but he was a good boy, and remained in Colorado, and the friends made glad in so doing, and the benefits and principles of the order were in this way spread to the world, and that the widow and orphan are not forgotten.

The Associated Charities also remembered the poor and destitute, sending a wagon to the west with some much-needed necessities, and our own children.

Epiphany Lodge I. O. O. F. remembered each of her widows on Christmas day, by giving them a fine turkey. Mrs. Nora Rohr, of that place, being one of them.

Elmer Meekle arrived here last week from his western home in Nebraska, to visit his friends and relatives. He was greatly pleased to find that his mother, who has been sick for some months, had a carriage of her own, and better than all, a good home for winter.
